When - as in the case of The Ganges - the owners seem to show zero interest in maintaining the building then it's time for Cornwall Council to step in and compulsorily purchase. As far as I know they have the powers to do this and they need to take action now.	Yes
2017-07-20 22:09:27 +01:00	In Penzance Parish but not in or near Chapel Street	Eating / drinking, Shopping, Work	Community venue, Tourist Information, Workplace	I work in one of be buildings opposite 18 Chapel Street. Not only is it very sad to see this once beautiful building being left to rot, it is also quite scary. Part of the roof has already fallen off into the road. fortunately in the early hours of the morning when no one was about. If action isn't taken soon I'm sure it's only a matter of time before someone gets hurt by another piece of the building falling off as it continues to decline. Further action needs to be taken now to ensure no one gets hurt.	Yes

This building is worth saving, and it seems wrong that it should be allowed to decay and become beyond the point where it could be saved. Only the Council has the power and means to prevent it getting to this stage. As things stand, it is a blot on the landscape of this lovely historic part of Penzance. Please act to save it. This is the right thing to do for the town, for the residents and businesses and the many people from far and near who walk up and down, to shop, visit excellent hostelrys and the churches, admire the well-kept and interesting properties that lead down to the harbour beyond. The only benefit that might come of its demolition would be a fat profit for some out-of-Cornwall development company. They appreciate the beauty and uniqueness of Chapel St., its history and array of independent shops, and, like many people we know, feel the state of The Ganges spoils the whole aspect of the street. A community centre with an integral Tourist Information centre would be an ideal addition to this amazing street.	Yes

Community venue, Tourist Information, Workplace	Please help this beautiful building. It will require effort as well as expense but I am convinced that you have here a rare opportunity to hand this town a very important venue for its community. I have championed many historic buildings here in London and believe me it is so very worth it to see these buildings come back to life. This particular building is stunning. It is a crime that the current owners have left it to rot in such an important street as this. Shame on them	Yes

The solution is to start working sensibly with the owners. I know for a fact the first floor owner is desperate to re-develop the site and they would welcome a site meeting with local councillors to discuss the way forward. The ground floor owner (it seems to me on the outside looking in) is the real problem here, he's had genuine, serious offers of purchase of the free hold but for whatever reason these have not been allowed to progress. Disregarding the roof (which both owners are jointly responsible for) it is quite obvious from the outside that the first floor has seen attention (look at the state of the windows for instance) while the	No

2017-06-27 13:28:06 +01:00	In or near Chapel Street	Live in or near Chapel St	Community venue, Eating / drinking, Housing, Office, Shop	The 'Ganges' building was constructed in about 1790 as the southern of a group of three substantial buildings. All three are grade 2 listed as of historic interest. The northernmost, Crownley, number 15, has been completely restored in recent years. The centre building, Trevelyan House, number 16, has been gradually restored to a high standard over the past 16 years. Meanwhile the 'Ganges' building has been left to rot. The roof fell off two years ago and is covered with plastic sheeting. One of the two chimneys alongside the forecourt of Chapel Street Methodist Church had to be taken down as it was unsafe. This gives the southern aspect of the building an unbalanced appearance. The building should be restored and the missing chimney replaced. I do not understand why the conservation department of Building Control at Cornwall Council have not taken legal action against the owners in order to get them to carry out the remedial work.	Yes

				place. At the shop we are asked often by visitors to Penzance why the Ganges is in that state of disrepair and we have no answer for them, people are very surprised a building could be left in its current state on such a beautiful street. I think this reflects really badly on the town. This is especially frustrating when small business owners and residents are working so hard on the street to maintain their buildings and successfully run their business's. These people are vital to the improvement and success of Penzance and something like the renovation of the Ganges, especially if used for a business or community project will further serve to not only enhance the look of the street and town but be an added draw to the area benefiting us all. Something will have to be done soon, so why wait?

I believe it could be an amazing community space with housing above for local homeless or vulnerable people, there needs to be more than just saving this beautiful building, there needs to be love and community. I am a local builder and would help to achieve these goals in any way I could.	Yes

I go ther sometimes just to enjoy looking at the buildings.	Community venue, Eating / drinking, Housing, Tourist Information, Other I cannot suggest uses as I do not know the internal layout. If the interior has original features they should be preserved, and this could restrict the type of use.	Penzance is a popular holiday destination because of its architecture, gardens and ambience. Renovating 18 Chapel Street can only enhance its appeal. I think that once restored 18 Chapel could have a front elevation to rival that of the recently restored brick house opposite custom house lane, which now has one of the most beautiful facades of Chapel Street.. I feel it is criminal that the owners are leaving it to fall apart and if something is not done soon, it may be beyond repair. I am concerned also that someone may decide to destroy it through vandalism or fire. It is also a danger to the public with bits falling off, we were fortunate nobody was injured when the tiles slid off and crashed onto the pavement. Keep up the pressure and hopefully a compulsory purchase will happen.	Yes

Eating / drinking, Live in or near Chapel St, Passing through, Shopping, Visit people, Other	Eating / drinking, Housing, Office, Shop, Workplace	The state of this building is dangerous. It creates a very bad impression of the town, and counteracts the other improvements and restoration projects which have made Penzance so wonderful recently. I do not think it would be a suitable community venue, the Market (LLoyds) building would be perfect for community use, it s the central point/focus of the town and is sadly underused.	Yes
2017-06-24 12:03:21 +01:00	In Penzance Parish but not in or near Chapel Street	Eating / drinking, Shopping, Tourist destination, Visit people	Housing, Office, Shop	It goes without saying that the Council should step in to save the building, the owners clearly aren't going to. At the very least the structure of the building is dangerous and has on two occasions had to have emergency works to make it safe. As a resident of Penzance I think that future uses should be carefully considered - the town is already served with numerous community venues and places to eat, although with the rising popularity of Penzance as a tourist destination an argument could be made for more good quality restaurants. Town centre housing, particularly of a good quality, is highly desirable. in order to balance the demographics of the town centre living spaces. I think the building would also be suitable for mixed occupation as well, perhaps with a shop, gallery or office on the ground floor and residential use on the first floor, although it could be argued that Penzance is already well serviced by retail units with many empty or occupied by charities.	Yes
